Espercet Clover.

The following is from the Idaho Avalanche:

For the past six weeks we have been reading articles concerning what the papers call Espercet and Aspercet, a new fodder, hay, grass or animal food, which, it is claimed by various persons, will grow anywhere, on the hillside, mountainsides and in the sagebrush valleys. We have not taken much stock in these reports because the cultivation of the so called grass would be to big a thing too have remained unknown so long. But believing that there was such a grass, and desiring to see its virtue tested, we sent to St. Louis for some of the seed, which we planted last week. We find the name of the plant to be called Espercet, or Sainfoin, which is described as follows:

Espercet, or Sainfoin (Hedysaum onobrychis)—This is a leguminous plant, with many stems from two to three feet long, straggling, tapering, smooth; leaves in pairs of pointed oblong leaflets slightly hairy on the underside; flower stalks higher than the leaves, ending in a spike of crimson or variegated flowers, succeeded by flat, hard pods, toothed on the edges and prickly on the sides; roots perennial, and hard and woody; flowers in July. It is an excellent forage plant, and improves the quality of milk when fed to milch cows. It will take twenty to thirty lbs. to sow one acre. Weight, 32 pounds per bushel.

It does not appear from the above description that it is intended for dry ground or moist soil. Upon receipt of the seed we inclosed some to each rancher in the county whose names we could remember. If we have overlooked any we will send some of the seed to such neglected persons, upon notification, so long as it holds out. In return we ask that each person to whom we have sent seed to be kind enough to plant some in moist and some in dry soil to test the manner of raising it. If it is half it is claimed to be, Snake River valley will, within ten years be a green pasture. Give the seed a fair chance, and have the kindness to report result.

WOODBURN HEARD FROM.

A RINGING LETTER ON THE ISSUE OF '88.

It doesn't sound much like that Dispatch to Reno.

The following letter from William Woodburn was received at Virginia City about three weeks ago:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Sam F. Jones: DEAR SIR:—I notice in the newspapers of Nevada that candidates for Congress and Supreme Justice will be nominated in the Republican State Convention on the 15th of May next.

The country is on the eve of a great political campaign, to be waged on the definite and desperate issues of protection to American industries and labor and pro-British free trade, or a tariff for revenue only, which is the nearest approach to it and is in fact a synonym for it.

The "Mills Bill" the spawn of the President's Message hatched out in the dark by a Democratic Committee of appropriations not only paralyzes every material industry in the nation but completely annihilates every budding industry in Nevada and California.

It is therefore apparent that Nevada should remain in the Republican column of States and should elect a Congressman who will vote to prevent a transfer of our industries to a foreign country to keep them flourishing at home.

With the exception of a few States, the free trade policy of the President as embodied in the Mills Bill has divided the Democracy in every section of the country, and makes it certain that the next House of Representatives will be overwhelmingly Republican. It would be, therefore, an idle economy to elect a Democrat who can have no standing with his party unless he votes to cripple the industries of the State he represents.

I rely on the sound judgment of the Republican party to nominate a man who will cut off such a possibility.

My name has been mentioned as a candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court. I never authorized the announcement, and never was, and am not now, a candidate, however much I may covet the position.

Circumstances over which I have no control, cripple my ability to make any complete canvass of the State as the importance of the campaign demands, were I nominated for Congress, and therefore have concluded not to present my name to the Convention.

I have no words to express my gratitude to the Republican party of Nevada for the repeated and unsolicited political honors it has conferred upon me. I will endeavor to earn its good opinion by active service in the coming fight, and ask no reward, but the election of every candidate on the Republican ticket.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM WOODBURN.

The above will also appear in the Virginia Enterprise of this morning.

—A pet plea of the revenue reformers of the Carlisle-Mills-Breckinridge-Texas-Kentucky-Arkansas school, is that more money is being collected through the revenue machinery than the country needs. They and all their echoes and adherents put that forward as an unanswerable plea; yet it is exceedingly weak. The country is not collecting more money than it needs, so long as the American navy is a butt for the jibes of the maritime and commercial world, and so long as the duty of the Government remains undone in the matter of what Samuel J. Tilden so justly described as our "defenceless coasts."

It is rather significant to find that the influences (those of the school above mentioned) which declare that the Government has no need for the revenue collected are the very same which do not build up the navy by furnishing the money for it, or put "our defenceless coasts" into defensible condition by doing the same thing.

RECOGNIZING SILVER.

The West Asked to Endorse Stewart on that Issue.

The Silver State tells of a good way to let the East see how we stand on the silver question. It says:

Republican Conventions in many of the States are endorsing some prominent citizen, and instructing their delegation to support him, for the Presidential nomination in the National Convention at Chicago. Ohio has endorsed Sherman; Iowa, Allison; Michigan, Alger; Indiana, Harrison, and at last, but by no means least, Maine has endorsed Blaine, notwithstanding his declaration that he is not a candidate. Under such circumstances, and in fact, without regarding what other States may do, Nevada Republicans should show their appreciation of Senator Stewart's efforts to remedy the evils resulting to silver from legislation in 1873, by instructing the delegates to Chicago to vote for him for President, first, last and all the time. He is a man of commanding presence, acknowledged ability and untiring energy. He is one of the leading champions of the double standard monetary system in the United States Senate, and he deserves much more than Blaine, to be the standard bearer of the silver men in the Presidential campaign. It devolves upon Nevada, whose interests he so ably represents, to present his claims for the Presidential nomination, and bring his name prominently before the country by instructing the delegates to Chicago to support him. The efforts of Nevada in his behalf would doubtless be seconded by the delegates from all the silver-producing States and Territories, and while he might not get the nomination, his solid support by the Pacific Coast would show the gold bugs that Western Republicans were not in sympathy with those of the East on the silver question. A strong endorsement of such an able and open champion of silver as William M. Stewart for the Presidential nomination by Nevada Republicans would prove that they are sincere in their desire to make amends for the fraudulent act of 1873, demonetizing silver, which was railroaded through a Republican Congress, at the instance of John Sherman, to enrich the bondholders at the expense of the masses.

A Colored Wretch.

The San Francisco Chronicle, says of Henry Henderson, so well known in Reno.

A few months ago a colored man named Henry Henderson, with his four children, the eldest being a step-daughter 14 years old, named Francis Drake, rented rooms from May Jenkins, a colored woman at 18 Morris avenue, an alley running off Harrison street near Sixth. Mrs. Jenkins frequently heard sounds in the rooms upstairs, as if a person was being beaten; she made an investigation a few days ago, and found Henderson beating his step-daughter. Her body was covered with bruises from previous beatings, and it was also discovered that the girl was in an interesting condition. Her step-father then took her to a lying-in hospital on Sixth St. Henderson could not be arrested for incest, but a warrant was sworn out charging him with battery.
